

Could This Be A Tree? It's only seven inches tall, but this slender twig is an investment in the future. Lillian Marino waters a three-month-old tree sapling, which will eventually be planted at one of the homes in Looking Upwards' residential program.

Looking Upwards launches Green Initiative

Tree planting is one of several projects that comprise Looking Upwards' Green Initiative. Other undertakings for 2008 include completion of a free RISE Engineering energy conservation audit and improvements to agency-wide recycling.

The agency already purchases all of its electricity through renewable sources as part of the RI Green-Up program and continues to make strides towards use of electronic communication to replace paper consumption whenever possible.
